Word of the Day – Plethora

Transcript

Hi everyone. Today's word of the day is plethora. Plethora means to have an abundant amount of something and so much that it cannot be counted. Simply put, it's an overabundance. In this way it's a very negative word, meaning that there's so much of something that you can't decipher, you can't understand, you can't comprehend the situation. I have three examples today

One: "The library is filled with a plethora of books. So much, that they cannot simply be read by one person alone."

So in this case the library has so many books that I cannot read them alone.

Second: "When shopping in Korea, a plethora of options leads to choice paralysis."

So this is very true. Shopping in Korea, there's so many things to buy that it makes it difficult to make a decision.

And finally: "There's a plethora of health information on the internet and this makes it difficult to decipher which advice is really best for our health. On one side it might say that eating beef is healthy while on another site it may say it's dangerous for your heart."

So in this case, there's so much health information I have a difficult time understanding what advice is really true. So I hope you can use plethora in your everyday lives. Thank you for listening to Practicast. You can find the script at Practicus.co.kr. Thank you and have a good day.
