Word of the Day – Property

Transcript

Hi everyone. This is Paul. Today's word of the day is property. Now, property is a noun and it's a very very diverse word. You can use it in many ways. Property's definition is something that you own, and that can be mostly anything that you own. It can be money, it can be things, it can be cars, it can be houses. But most cases when you use it, it's for tangible things; things that you can touch. For example,

“My property included a house, a car, a boat, and a summer house in Milan.”

Now, you can also use property as another way to say your house because usually when you have a house you have a lawn, a backyard and a garage. So if you want to include all those things in one word you can use property. For example,

“Please step off my property as I did not invite you to my residence.”
