Hillary Clinton

STRENGTHS

- She has more relevant experience than any other presidential candidate before her. (First Lady, Senator, Secretary of State)
- She has strong support from racial, sexual, and religious minorities. (Black/latino support higher than even Sanders.)
- She has the proven ability to assemble broad coalitions. (Bipartisan support on issues, even acknowledged by some republicans as more compromising than Obama.)

WEAKNESSES

- She has been involved in scandals that tarnish her trustworthiness. (Private e-mail server for official communications. Now, DNC chairwoman issue and taking her on as honorary chair of campaign.)
- She has weak support from young and independent voters. (Lukewarm support from even many of her supporters.)
- Her mission statements have not inspired new voters to back her. (No message of change, much of status quo.)

Donald Trump

STRENGTHS

- He has been outside a system that many have come to distrust. (Shares Sanders's message that system is rigged for the rich and powerful.)
- He has strong support from white voters who feel alienated. (Comes amid social sentiment like "reverse racism," "anti-freedom of religion," etc.)
- He has the proven ability to control the media. (Reality shows, etc.)

WEAKNESSES

- He has no experience in government or expertise in policy issues. (Makes promises he can't keep. No authority to e.g. deport 11 mil illegals w/o due process (search/arrest warrants; court, where there's already backlog, etc.))
- He has weak support from the establishment of his own political party. (Bushes have declined to support, same in reverse w/ Ryan and McCain.)
- His style is seen as extremist and controversial. (E.g. to build a wall and make MX pay; to temporarily bar all Muslims from entry, etc. Controversy w/ comments on women, servicemen.)
