Millions of Koreans were stunned and shocked last week as they learned of an amazing revelation about two of the most famous celebrities in South Korea. News circuits and online social channels were a buzz regarding the 14- year secret marriage between, K-pop icon, Seo Tai-ji and, actress, Lee Ji-ah. Seo Tai-ji is said to be "the President of Culture" in the 1990s with hit songs such as "Class Idea" and "Come Back Home". His music had won the hearts and minds of Koreans as his music contained controversial yet influential messages to teenagers. Lee Ji-ah was the heroine of the hit drama "Taewangsasingi" and most recently "Athena" (2010). It was revealed that the two had gotten married in 1997 and had filed for divorce in 2006 but have been engaged in a legal dispute regarding their divorce settlement. Lee Ji-ah is currently demanding approximately 500 million won in cash and 5 billion won in property. The divorce suit became known when the Court held the second trial of their case. What has made this already scandalous situation even juicier is that Lee Ji-ah is currently dating heartthrob actor, Jung Woo-sung, making this a truly surreal love triangle between three of the most recognizable stars of Korea.

People were equally shocked, but are responding differently. Some argue that the privacy of any individual, even that of a celebrity, should be respected. As one of the most spotlighted celebrities in Korea, Seo Tai-ji understandably had to hide his personal life from the public. Others have a different view. Entertainers are public figures who should maintain high level of integrity. Deceiving the public while enjoying the advantages of being a celebrity can never be tolerated.
